I am a graduate of the National Film and Television School producing course. I have extensive knowledge of all aspects of feature film and television production. I joined Raindog Films in 2015 in the capacity of a creative executive responsible for the development of the feature film and television slate. In 2017 I moved to the ranks of Left Bank Pictures working on the action-adventure show Strike Back and most recently The Fear Index. Alongside practical production, the roles also consisted of running a writers room, overseeing an editorial script team and continuing script development during the shooting process. I also maintain a small slate of my own film and television projects.
